Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

3. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

4. Claims 1-43 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Harrison in view of Grace.

As to claim 1, Harrison discloses a method for determining whether two or more parameters influence one another within a communications network (see abstract), comprising the steps of: obtaining a set of measurements for two or more parameters within the communications network (see page 1, lines 20-23); Grace disclose obtaining a set of measurements for two or more parameters within the communications network (see page 1, lines 8-15); determining a correlation between each of the two or more parameters (see page 3, lines 7-21); determining a partial correlation between each of the two or more parameters (see page 3, line 32 – page 4, line 20); determining whether the correlations and the partial correlations are statistically significant (see page 4, lines 34-37); and determining whether the two or more parameters, if any, influence one another based on the statistically significant correlations and partial correlations (see col. 7, lines 6-28). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of the ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to combine Harrison and Grace teachings for the simple purpose of designing a reliable system with less faults conditions.

As to claims 2-11, Harrison discloses a list of parameters in a communication network to measure performance and quality (see page 1, lines 4-23;), and Grace discloses a list of parameters in a communication network to measure (see col. 1, lines 11-22). Also, OFFICIAL NOTICE is taken that using parameters to monitor system performance and quality is a common and well known in the art; therefore, it would be obvious to one of the ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to measure where data is or where is most convenient any parameter that affects the system.

As to claims 12-14, grace discloses the storage and retrieval of the measured parameters (see page 8, lines 3-30).

As to claim 15, Grace discloses identifying and solving a problem using the parameters (see page 6, line 32 – page 7, line 5).

Regarding claims 16-29, they are the corresponding apparatus claims of method claims 1-14. Therefore, claims 16-29 are rejected for the same reason shown above.

Regarding claims 30-43, they are the corresponding system claims of method claims 1-14. Therefore, claims 30-43 are rejected for the same reason shown above.
